

Don't Wait—Ensure Your Family's Legal Safety Now!

NEWSLETTER: ISSUE 08

Hi, there!

September is National Preparedness Month—and while we usually think about packing disaster kits or making evacuation plans, have you considered how legally prepared your family is? Emergencies can happen when we least expect them, and just like having extra batteries or water stored away, having your legal affairs in order is essential for protecting your family.

At Lebron Law, PLLC, we know that being prepared goes beyond having a plan for storms or fires. Life can be unpredictable, and when you have custody arrangements, guardianship responsibilities, or you're going through a divorce, legal preparedness becomes even more crucial.

Here are some important ways you can prepare legally—and why it's just as important as your emergency kit:

What if a Disaster Strikes During a

Emergencies don't always wait for the right time, and that includes during child custody exchanges. Does your current custody plan cover what happens in case of an evacuation or sudden displacement? If not, it's time to make sure both parents are on the same page—your child's safety depends on it.

Have You Named a

for your children?

We all hope nothing ever happens to us, but if it did, would your kids be cared for by someone you trust? Establishing a legal guardian ensures that in a crisis, your children will be in good hands. Just like an emergency contact, having a legal guardian in place is a key part of family preparedness.

Who Makes the Emergency Decisions if You're

Emergencies often require quick decisions. If you're divorced or separated, does your parenting plan clearly spell out who makes those decisions for your child? Whether it's medical care or an evacuation, knowing who has the authority can prevent confusion when every minute counts. If your plan doesn't account for emergencies, it's time to revisit it.

Just like you'd have a disaster kit with essentials, make sure your important legal documents are organized and ready to go. Wills, custody agreements, guardianship papers, emergency contacts—all of these should be in a safe place and easy to access if you need them at a moment's notice.

Take Action Today—Don't Wait for the Unexpected!

We can't predict the future, but we can prepare for it. During this National Preparedness Month, take a moment to not only review your emergency plan but also ensure your family's legal protections are in place.
